The Home loan process in India usually goes through the following stages:

Home Loan Application & Documentation

You can apply for a home loan online from the ease and comfort of your home with HDFC Bank's online application feature. Alternatively, you can share your contact details here for our loan experts to get in touch with you and take your loan application forward.

The documentation needed to be submitted along with your home loan application form is available here. This link provides a detailed checklist of KYC, Income and property related documents required for the processing of your loan application. The checklist is indicative and additional documents could be asked for during the home loan sanction process.

Approval & Disbursement of Home Loan

Approval Process: The home loan is assessed basis the documents submitted as per the above-mentioned checklist and the approved amount is communicated to the customer. There might be a difference between the housing loan amount applied for and the amount approved. On approval of the housing loan, a sanction letter detailing the loan amount, tenure, applicable interest rate, repayment mode and other special conditions required to be fulfilled by the applicants is issued.

Disbursement Process: The housing loan disbursement process begins with submitting the original property related documents to HDFC Bank. In case the property is an under-construction property, disbursement is done in tranches according to the construction linked payment plan provided by the developer. In the case of construction/home improvement/home extension loans, disbursement is done as per the progress of construction/improvement as per the estimate provided. For second sale / resale properties the complete loan amount is disbursed at the time of execution of a sale deed.

Repayment of Home Loan

Repayment of home loans is done through Equated Monthly Installments (EMIs), which is a combination of interest and principal. In the case of loans for resale homes, EMI begins from the month subsequent to the month in which disbursement of the loan is done. In the case of loans for under-construction properties, EMI usually begins once the construction is complete and the house loan is fully disbursed. Customers can however also choose to begin their EMIs sooner. The EMIs will proportionately increase with every partial disbursement made as per the progress of construction.

The following types of Home Loans products are usually offered in India by Housing Finance Institutions:

Home Loans

These are Loans availed for:

1. The purchase of a flat, row house, bungalow from private developers in approved projects;
2. Loans for purchase of properties from Development Authorities such as DDA, MHADA as well as Existing Co-operative Housing Societies, Apartment Owners' Association or Development Authorities settlements or privately built up homes;
3. Loans for construction on a freehold / lease hold plot or on a plot allotted by a Development Authority

Plot Purchase Loan

Plot purchase loans are availed for purchase of a plot through direct allotment or a second sale transaction as well as to transfer your existing plot purchase loan availed from another bank /financial Institution.

Balance Transfer Loan

Transferring your outstanding home loan availed from another Bank / Financial Institution to HDFC Bank is known as a balance transfer loan.

House Renovation Loans

House Renovation Loan is a loan for renovating (without altering the structure/carpet area) your home in many ways such as tiling, flooring, internal / external plaster and painting etc.

Home Extension Loan

Home Extension Loan helps you to extend or add space to your home such as additional rooms and floors etc.

Yes. You can avail two home loans at the same time. However, the approval of your loan depends on your repayment capacity. It is up to HDFC Bank to assess your eligibility and ability to repay the EMIs for two home loans.

For your convenience, HDFC Bank offers various modes for repayment of your house loan. You may issue standing instructions to your banker to pay the installments through ECS (Electronic Clearing System), opt for direct deduction of monthly installments by your employer or issue post-dated cheques from your salary account.

The maximum repayment tenure depends on the type of housing loans you are availing, your profile, age, maturity of loan etc.

For home loans and balance transfer loans, the maximum tenure is 30 years or till the age of retirement, whichever is lower.

For Home Extension Loans, the maximum tenure is 20 years or till the age of retirement, whichever is lower.

For Home Renovation and Top-Up Loans, the maximum tenure is 15 years or till the age of retirement, whichever is lower.

EMI's begins from the month subsequent to the month in which disbursement of the loan is done. For loans for under-construction properties EMI usually begins after the complete home loan is disbursed but customers can choose to begin their emi's as soon as they avail their first disbursement and their EMI's will increase proportionately with every subsequent disbursement. For resale cases, since the whole loan amount is disbursed in one go, EMI on the whole loan amount start from the subsequent to the month of disbursement

Pre-EMI is the monthly payment of interest on your Housing loan. This amount is paid during the period till the full disbursement of the loan. Your actual loan tenure — and EMI (comprising of both principal and interest) payments — begins once the Pre-EMI phase is over i.e. post the house loan has been fully disbursed.

All co-owners of the property need to be co-applicants to the house loan. Generally, co-applicants are close family members.

Your housing loan interest rate depends on the type of loan you choose. There are two types of loans:

Adjustable Rate or Floating Rate

In an adjustable or floating rate loan, the interest rate on your loan is linked to your lender's benchmark rate. Any movement in the benchmark rate will effectuate a proportionate change in your applicable interest rate. The interest rates are reset at defined intervals. The reset can be according to the financial calendar, or they can be unique to each customer, depending on the first date of disbursement. HDFC Bank may at its sole discretion, at any point during the subsistence of the loan agreement, alter the interest rate reset cycle on a prospective basis.

Combination Loans

A combination loan is part fixed and part floating. Post the fixed rate tenure, the loan switches to an adjustable rate.

Yes. You can prepay your home loan (in part or in full) before the completion of your actual loan tenure. Please note that while there are no prepayment charges on floating rate home loans unless the same availed for business purposes.

No. You don't need to have a guarantor for your home loan. You will only be asked for a guarantor in certain situations, namely:

- * When the primary applicant has a weak financial standing
- * When the applicant wants to borrow an amount that is beyond their eligibility.
- * When the applicant earns less than the established minimum income criteria.

No. Housing loan insurance is not mandatory. However, it is advisable that you buy insurance for protection against any unforeseeable circumstances.

A housing loan provisional certificate is a summary of the interest and the principal amounts repaid by you towards your loan during a financial year. It is provided to you by HDFC Bank and is required for claiming tax deductions. If you are an existing customer, you can easily download your provisional home loan provisional certificate from our online portal .

Our HDFC Bank Reach Loans make home buying possible for micro-entrepreneurs and salaried individuals who may or may not have sufficient proof of income documentation. You can apply for a house loan with minimal income documentation with HDFC Bank Reach.

HDFC Bank disburses loans for under construction properties in installments based on the progress of construction. Every installment disbursed is known as a 'part' or a 'subsequent' disbursement.

You can apply for a pre approved home loan which is an in-principal approval for a loan given on the basis of your income, creditworthiness and financial position. Generally, pre-approved loans are taken prior to property selection and are valid for a period of 6 months from the date of sanction of the loan.

Securing a housing loan from HDFC bank is a simple and involves meeting certain criteria such as a stable income, good credit score, and a reasonable debt-to-income ratio. The loan amount is determined by factors like creditworthiness and other bank policies. Essential documents include proof of income, KYC, employment verification, and details about assets and debts. To enhance approval chances, it is advisable to maintain a healthy credit score, save for a down payment, and minimize outstanding debts. Various loan types, including fixed-rate, adjustable-rate, etc cater to different needs, allowing borrowers to choose the option that best aligns with their financial situation and preferences.

Housing Loan Repayment Options

Step Up Repayment Facility (SURF)*

SURF offers an option where the repayment schedule is linked to the expected growth in your income. You can avail a higher amount of loan and pay lower EMIs in the initial years. Subsequently, the repayment is accelerated proportionately with the assumed increase in your income.

Flexible Loan Installments Plan (FLIP)*

FLIP offers a customized solution to suit your repayment capacity which is likely to alter during the term of the loan. The loan is structured in such a way that the EMI is higher during the initial years and subsequently decreases in proportion to the income.

Tranche Based EMI

If you purchase an under-construction property you are generally required to service only the interest on the loan amount drawn till the final disbursement of the loan and pay EMIs thereafter. In case you wish to start principal repayment immediately you may opt to tranche the loan and start paying EMIs on the cumulative amounts disbursed.

Accelerated Repayment Scheme

This option provides you the flexibility to increase the EMIs every year in proportion to the increase in your income which will result in you repaying the loan much faster.

Applicable only to salaried individuals.*
